To form the plural of most nouns, simply add s:

- pencil → pencils
- book → books
- file → files

But note these exceptions when you must add es to form a plural noun:
Add es to nouns that end in s, z, x, sh, or ch.

- glass → glasses
- waltz → waltzes
- box → boxes
- brush → brushes
- wrench → wrenches

For nouns that end in a consonant + y, change the y to i and add es.

- hobby → hobbies
- lady → ladies
- ruby → rubies

For nouns that end in a vowel + y, the rule to add s applies.

- tray → trays
- journey → journeys

Add es to nouns that end in a consonant + o.

- potato → potatoes
- hero → heroes

If a noun ends in a vowel + o, the rule to add s applies.

- zoo → zoos
- radio → radios

Warning there are exceptions to this exception!

- piano → pianos
- taco → tacos

The rule and normal exceptions do not apply to IRREGULAR nouns.

- child → children
- woman → women
- foot → feet
- mouse → mice
- sheep → sheep
- goose → geese
There are two types of relative clauses using reflexive pronouns.

Non-Restrictive Clauses (Non-Defining Clauses)

For People

The President of the United States, who is visiting Moscow, claimed that relations between the two countries were at their best for twenty years.

NB - you cannot use that here (after a comma).

For Things

The intermission, which lasts for fifteen minutes, comes halfway through the film.

Notes about Non-Restrictive Clauses (Non-Defining Clauses)

In this type of relative clause, the information is not essential; it could be deleted without making the sentence ungrammatical and it would still be clear who or what we are talking about.

Restrictive Clauses (Defining Clauses)

For People

The man that stole my car was fined. (this is used in American and British English)

The man who stole my car was fined. (this is used in British English)

For Things

The company which made it has gone bankrupt.

*The company that made it has gone bankrupt.

Notes about Restrictive Clauses (Defining Clauses)

In this type of relative clause, the information is essential; if it is deleted, then the sentence will no longer make sense as we will not understand who or what is being talked about.
Using Pronouns Clearly

Because a pronoun REFERS BACK to a noun or TAKES THE PLACE OF that noun, you have to use the correct pronoun so that your reader clearly understands which noun your pronoun is referring to.
Therefore, pronouns should:

1. AGREE in NUMBER

   If the pronoun takes the place of a singular noun, you have to use a singular pronoun.
   If a student parks a car on campus, he or she has to buy a parking sticker.
   (NOT: If a student parks a car on campus, they have to buy a parking sticker.)
   REMEMBER: The words EVERYBODY, ANYBODY, ANYONE, EACH, NEITHER, NOBODY, SOMEONE, A PERSON, etc. are singular and take singular pronouns.
   Everybody ought to do his or her best. (NOT: their best)
   Neither of the girls brought her umbrella. (NOT: their umbrellas)
   NOTE: Many people find the construction "his or her" wordy, so if it is possible to use a plural noun as your antecedent so that you can use "they" as your pronoun, it may be wise to do so. If you do use a singular noun and the context makes the gender clear, then it is permissible to use just "his" or "her" rather than "his or her." See our handout on Non-sexist Language for more information.

2. AGREE in PERSON

   If you are writing in the "first person" (I), don't confuse your reader by switching to the "second person" (you) or "third person" (he, she, they, it, etc.). Similarly, if you are using the "second person," don't switch to "first" or "third."
   When a person comes to class, he or she should have his or her homework ready.
   (NOT: When a person comes to class, you should have your homework ready.)

3. REFER CLEARLY to a specific noun.

   Don't be vague or ambiguous.
   NOT: Although the motorcycle hit the tree, it was not damaged. (Is "it" the motorcycle or the tree?)
   NOT: I don't think they should show violence on TV. (Who are "they"?)
   NOT: Vacation is coming soon, which is nice. (What is nice, the vacation or the fact that it is coming soon?)
   NOT: George worked in a national forest last summer. This may be his life's work. (What word does "this" refer to?)
   NOT: If you put this sheet in your notebook, you can refer to it. (What does "it" refer to, the sheet or your notebook?)
Avoid problems created by these words or phrases:

1. And also This is often redundant.
2. And/or Outside of the legal world, most of the time this construction is used, it is neither necessary nor logical. Try using one word or the other.
3. As to whether The single word whether will suffice.
4. Basically, essentially, totally These words seldom add anything useful to a sentence. Try the sentence without them and, almost always, you will see the sentence improve.
5. Being that or being as These words are a non-standard substitute for because. Because Because I was the youngest child, I always wore hand-me-downs.
6. Considered to be Eliminate the to be and, unless it's important who's doing the considering, try to eliminate the entire phrase.
7. Due to the fact that Using this phrase is a sure sign that your sentence is in trouble. Did you mean because? Due to is acceptable after a linking verb (The team's failure was due to illness among the stars.); otherwise, avoid it.
8. Each and every One or the other, but not both.
9. Equally as Something can be equally important or as important as, but not equally as important.
10. Etc. This abbreviation often suggests a kind of laziness. It might be better to provide one more example, thereby suggesting that you could have written more, but chose not to.
11. He/she is a convention created to avoid gender bias in writing, but it doesn't work very well and it becomes downright obtrusive if it appears often. Use he or she or pluralize (where appropriate) so you can avoid the problem of the gender-specific pronoun altogether.
12. Firstly, secondly, thirdly, etc. Number things with first, second, third, etc. and not with these adverbial forms.
13. Got Many writers regard got as an ugly word, and they have a point. If you can avoid it in writing, do so. I have got to must begin studying right away. I have got two pairs of sneakers.
14. Had ought or hadn't ought. Eliminate the auxiliary had. You hadn't ought not to pester your sister that way.
15. Interesting One of the least interesting words in English, the word you use to describe an ugly baby. If you show us why something is interesting, you're doing your job.
16. In terms of See if you can eliminate this phrase.
17. Irregardless No one word will get you in trouble with the boss faster than this one.
18. Kind of or sort of. These are OK in informal situations, but in formal academic prose, substitute somewhat, rather or slightly. We were kind of rather pleased with the results.
19. Literally This word might be confused with literarily, a seldom used adverb relating to authors or scholars and their various professions. Usually, though, if you say it's "literally a jungle out there," you probably mean figuratively, but you're probably better off without either word.
20. Lots or lots of In academic prose, avoid these colloquialisms when you can use many or much. Remember, when you do use these words, that lots of something countable are plural. Remember, too, that a lot of requires three words: "He spent a lot of money" (not alot of).
21. Just Use only when you need it, as in just the right amount.
22. Nature See if you can get rid of this word. Movies of a violent nature are probably just violent movies.
23. Necessitate It's hard to imagine a situation that would necessitate the use of this word.
24. Of Don't write would of, should of, could of when you mean would have, should have, could have.
25. On account of Use because instead.
26. Only Look out for placement. Don't write "He only kicked that ball ten yards" when you mean "He kicked that ball only ten yards."
27. Orientate The new students become oriented, not orientated. The same thing applies to administrate -- we administer a project.
28. Per Use according to instead. We did it per your instructions? Naah. (This word is used frequently in legal language and in technical specifications, where it seems to be necessary and acceptable.)
29. Plus Don't use this word as a conjunction. Use and instead.
30. Point in time Forget it! At this time or at this point or now will do the job.
31. Previous as in "our previous discussion." Use earlier or nothing at all.
32. So as to Usually, a simple to will do.
33. Suppose to, use to. The hard "d" sound in supposed to and used to disappears in pronunciation, but it shouldn't disappear in spelling. "We used to do that" or "We were supposed to do it this way."
34. The reason why is because. Deja vu all over again!
35. Thru This nonstandard spelling of through should not be used in academic prose.
36. 'Til Don't use this word instead of until or till, even in bad poetry.
37. Try and Don't try and do something. Try to do something.
38. Thusly Use thus or therefore instead.
39. Utilize Don't use this word where use would suffice. (Same goes for utilization.)
40. Very, really, quite (and other intensifiers) Like basically, these words seldom add anything useful. Try the sentence without them and see if it improves.
Predicate Nominative

A predicate nominative is a noun or pronoun which follows the verb and describes or renames the subject. It is another way of naming the subject. It follows a linking verb. The predicate nominatives on this page have been italicized.

Sometimes called a predicate noun, a predicate nominative is a noun or pronoun that appears in the predicate of a sentence, following a linking verb and having the same referent as the subject of the sentence: She is my sister. I was the captain. Pronouns in this function are in the nominative case in Oratorical and Formal contexts, but Conversational levels can use objective case pronouns: It’s me and It was us occur in Standard Conversational uses, alongside This is she and It was we who were embarrassed.

predicate nominative
A noun or pronoun that follows a linking verb and refers to the same person or thing as the subject, as firefighter in Jim was a firefighter.
The following is a list of verbs and prepositions which commonly appear together.

accuse (someone) of ([doing] something) add (something) to (something else) admire (someone) for ([doing] something) agree on (topic) agree with (someone) apologize to (someone) for ([doing] something) apply to (a place) for (something) approve of (something) argue with (someone) about (topic) arrive at (a building, room, site, event) arrive in (a city, country)
ask (someone) about (someone/topic) ask (someone) for (something) believe in (something) belong to (someone) blame (someone) for ([doing] something) borrow (something) from (someone) care about (someone/something/topic) comment on (topic)

compare (something) to/with (something else) complain to (someone) about (something) concentrate on ([doing] something) congratulate (someone) for/on ([doing] something) consist of (some things) consent to ([doing] something) contribute to (something) count on (someone) to (do something) cover (something) with (something else)

decide on (topic) depend on (someone) for (something) discuss (something) with (someone) distinguish (something) from (something else) dream about/of (someone/something) escape from (somewhere) explain (topic) to (someone) excuse (someone) for ([doing] something) forgive (someone for ([doing] something) get rid of (something) graduate from (a place) happen to (someone) help (someone) with (something) hide (something) from (someone)

Prepositions of Time, of Place, and to Introduce Objects

One point in time
On is used with days:

- I will see you on Monday.
- The week begins on Sunday.

At is used with noon, night, midnight, and with the time of day:

- My plane leaves at noon.
- The movie starts at 6 p.m.

In is used with other parts of the day, with months, with years, with seasons:

- He likes to read in the afternoon.
- The days are long in August.
- The book was published in 1999.
- The flowers will bloom in spring.

Extended time
To express extended time, English uses the following prepositions: since, for, by, from—to, from-until, during,(with)in

- She has been gone since yesterday. (She left yesterday and has not returned.)
- I'm going to Paris for two weeks. (I will spend two weeks there.)
- The movie showed from August to October. (Beginning in August and ending in October.)
- The decorations were up from spring until fall. (Beginning in spring and ending in fall.)
- I watch TV during the evening. (For some period of time in the evening.)
- We must finish the project within a year. (No longer than a year.)

Place
To express notions of place, English uses the following prepositions: to talk about the point itself: in, to express something contained: inside, to talk about the surface: on, to talk about a general vicinity, at. For more detail, see our handouts on Prepositions of Location and Prepositions of Direction.
• There is a wasp in the room.
• Put the present inside the box.
• I left your keys on the table.
• She was waiting at the corner.

Higher than a point
To express notions of an object being higher than a point, English uses the following prepositions: over, above. For more detail, see our handout on Prepositions of Spatial Relationship.

• He threw the ball over the roof.
• Hang that picture above the couch.

Lower than a point
To express notions of an object being lower than a point, English uses the following prepositions: under, underneath, beneath, below. For more detail, see our handout on Prepositions of Spatial Relationship.

• The rabbit burrowed under the ground.
• The child hid underneath the blanket.
• We relaxed in the shade beneath the branches.
• The valley is below sea-level.

Close to a point
To express notions of an object being close to a point, English uses the following prepositions: near, by, next to, between, among, opposite. For more detail, see our handout on Prepositions of Spatial Relationship.

• She lives near the school.
• There is an ice cream shop by the store.
• An oak tree grows next to my house
• The house is between Elm Street and Maple Street.
• I found my pen lying among the books.
• The bathroom is opposite that room.

To introduce objects of verbs
English uses the following prepositions to introduce objects of the following verbs.

At: glance, laugh, look, rejoice, smile, stare

• She took a quick glance at her reflection.
  (exception with mirror: She took a quick glance in the mirror.)
• You didn't laugh at his joke.
• I'm looking at the computer monitor.
• We rejoiced at his safe rescue.
• That pretty girl smiled at you.
• Stop staring at me.

Of: approve, consist, smell

• I don't approve of his speech.
• My contribution to the article consists of many pages.
• He came home smelling of alcohol.

Of (or about): dream, think

• I dream of finishing college in four years.
• Can you think of a number between one and ten?
• I am thinking about this problem.

For: call, hope, look, wait, watch, wish

• Did someone call for a taxi?
• He hopes for a raise in salary next year.
• I'm looking for my keys.
• We'll wait for her here.
• You go buy the tickets and I'll watch for the train.
• If you wish for an "A" in this class, you must work hard.
COMMA RULES

There are many more places a comma DOES NOT belong than places where it is needed, so remember, “When in doubt, leave it out!”

1. “Series of Three.” Use a comma to separate items in a series. These items may consist of words, phrases, or clauses.

   I’d like a big bowl of fruit with apples, pears, peaches, and plums.

2. Use a comma to separate independent clauses joined by the coordinating conjunctions for, and, nor, but, or, yet, so.

   Greene has washed his old car, and he hopes somebody will buy it.

3. When a sentence begins with a dependent clause, a comma goes at the end of the dependent clause, where it joins the independent clauses.

   Although he had already eaten dinner, he ate a sandwich.

4. “Introductory and transitional elements.” These should be separated from the rest of the sentence by a comma.

   Usually, he took a nap after dinner.

5. “Contrasting elements.” Use a comma to separate a contrasting element from the rest of the sentence, because the comma emphasizes the contrast.

   He came to dance with me, and not with you.
6. “Additional information.” An element which is not essential to the meaning of the sentence but merely supplemental is set off by a comma after it if it occurs at the beginning of a sentence. If this element appears in the middle of the sentence, it has a comma before and one after.

   Mr. Morris, the patient in room 950, had surgery this morning.

7. “Clarity.” Use a comma, even in places you wouldn’t ordinarily, if it is necessary to make the meaning of the sentence clear.

   Whatever he did, did no good.

COMMA MISUSE

DO NOT put commas in these places:

1. Between a subject and a verb.

   Our house, burned to the ground. (incorrect)
   Our house burned to the ground. (correct)

2. Joining two independent clauses without a conjunction.

   The telephone rang, Joe couldn’t go back to sleep. (incorrect)
   The telephone rang. Joe couldn’t go back to sleep. (correct)

3. In a series of only two.

   I need to buy a gray summer suit, and a pair of white linen pants. (incorrect)
   I need to buy a gray summer suit and a pair of white linen pants. (correct)
4. Before a prepositional phrase.

   The cat was hiding, under the pillow. (incorrect)
   The cat was hiding under the pillow. (correct)

5. If an added element is essential to the meaning of the sentence.

   People who are very poor drivers, should have their license revoked.
   (incorrect)
   People who are very poor drivers should have their license revoked.
   (correct)

   Bakersfield, CA, 93305 (incorrect)
   Bakersfield, CA 93305 (correct)

7. If the sentence is really short.

   I laughed, but he cried. (incorrect)
   I laughed but he cried. (correct)

8. When the sentence begins with an independent clause and the subordinating conjunction comes before the dependent clause.

   I was ready to go, even before they called me. (incorrect)
   I was ready to go even before they called me. (correct)
Student Success Lab

Handout

Sentence Fragments

Fragments are incomplete sentences. Usually, fragments are pieces of sentences that have become disconnected from the main clause. One of the easiest ways to correct them is to remove the period between the fragment and the main clause.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Fragment</th>
<th>Possible Revision</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Purdue offers many majors in engineering. Such as electrical, chemical, and industrial engineering</td>
<td>Purdue offers many majors in engineering, such as electrical, chemical, and industrial engineering.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>I need to find a new roommate. Because the one I have now isn’t working out too well.</td>
<td>I need to find a new roommate because the one I have now isn’t Working out too well.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>The current city policy on housing is incomplete as it stands. Which is why we believe the proposed amendments should be passed.</td>
<td>Because the current city policy on housing is incomplete, we believe the proposed amendments should be passed.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Some fragments are not clearly pieces of sentences that have been left unattached to the main clause; they are written as main clauses but lack a subject or main verb.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Fragment</th>
<th>Possible Revisions</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>A story with deep thoughts and emotions.</td>
<td>She told a story with deep thoughts and emotions.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Toys of all kinds thrown around.</td>
<td>Toys of all kinds were thrown around. They found all kinds of toys thrown around.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>With the ultimate effect of all advertising is to sell the product.</td>
<td>The ultimate effect of all advertising is to sell the product.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>