After The War What Should Be Done With Germany

BY JULIA ANDERSON

When Germany first invaded Poland, she said, "We are a nation that will conquer or die.

Germany's people are not stupider than the rest of us. Germany has been a success for thousands of years. But now, since our only way to continue is to conquer, why not conquer, too?" Germany is not a nation that can be killed. It is a nation that must be conquered. Why not conquer? Germany has been a success for thousands of years. Why not conquer?

Germany is not a nation that can be killed. It is a nation that must be conquered. Why not conquer? Germany has been a success for thousands of years. Why not conquer?

Accept Your Responsibility!

Are you deportable? Do you make appointments and then "forget" to keep them? Do you promise to do something and then just not do it? In other words, do you COOPERATE? If not, there are many things which will be difficult for you, from passing a telephone call to passing an examination.

The world will always be strange and difficult to understand and the chances of making progress on our own will be greatly reduced if we do not have a large body of people who will cooperate with us. The campus, the city, the state, the nation need us. Are you willing to do your share?

Let’s All Take Psychology

Sir William O. S., one of England’s most renowned physicians, who has just been a distinguished addresses to a group of young people, outlined a number of qualities he thought most important to successful practice. Among these qualities was intellectual ability—that faculty which enables an individual to have coolness and presence of mind under all circumstances. It is pointed out that often the behavior of other people can be predicted with surprising accuracy, and Dr. O. says the remedy is not to expect too much of the people about whom one dwells.

Modern educational programs offer us many opportunities to fit ourselves for occupations we have chosen. These programs also differ. Existing in psychology, which I hope to cover on these cornerstones for intellectual development through understanding of human nature.

Psychology, unlike English, is not a "must" in our general school courses, but it is a subject every student who would do well to voluntarily place on his study schedule. There is a great deal to the story than just learning to be calm amidst a personal upheaval. The influence of such a quality is far-reaching; through individual understanding comes group and mass perception. It is on this basic structure that a better world system can be built and each of us can win a part in its construction.

Schools of Deaf, Blind Offer Employment

Both the California School for the Deaf and the California School for the Blind, located in Berkeley within easy walking distance of many of the University’s courses, have need for, and can employ each year a limited number of boys and girls who are enrolled in any school of higher education.

These students assist in the Ann Arbor, Michigan, and they have helped in any school of higher education.

The work begins in September and continues until the following June. Student assistants work an average of twenty-four hours a week, and their work is conducted at the camps and the University.

Two of the best students are going to make the world a better place for the deaf and blind children who attend these schools. The work is mainly practical, and the students are supervised and taught.
