California State Polytechnic College's basketball teams received a boost in the form of a report yesterday in San Jose. The report was a result of a survey conducted by the State Interscholastic Athletic Association (SIAA) which revealed the need for additional funding for the basketball programs. The SIAA recommended that the college allocate more resources to these programs to improve their competitiveness at the state and national levels.

The report highlighted the strengths of the basketball teams, including their ability to attract talented players and their strong coaching staffs. It also identified areas for improvement, such as better facilities and equipment. The SIAA recommended that the college increase its budget for these programs to provide the necessary support.

The college administration has committed to implementing the SIAA's recommendations and has already taken steps to improve the financial support for the basketball programs. This includes increasing the budget for these programs and investing in new facilities and equipment.

The college basketball teams have responded positively to the improved funding, and their players and coaches are eagerly looking forward to the upcoming season. They are confident that with the increased resources, they will be able to compete at a higher level and achieve greater success on the court.

The college community is also excited about the improvement in the basketball programs, and there is a strong sense of pride among students, faculty, and staff. The teams are expected to perform well in the upcoming season, and the college administration is committed to providing the necessary support to ensure their success.

The college basketball teams will continue to work hard to improve their skills and strategies, and they are confident that they will be able to achieve their goals with the increased resources. The college community is looking forward to the exciting season ahead and to watching the teams compete at a higher level.

Who Receives Awards?

An event such as theatre's 1960 Spring Gala held last week was praised by many students and faculty members for its contribution to student body activities. The Gala, which took place in the auditorium, was a sell-out success and filled the auditorium with music, laughter, and excitement.

The event was organized by the Student Activities Committee, headed by Judy Fisher, director of publicity. Fisher's selection of performers was a hit with the audience, who enjoyed a variety of acts ranging from musical performances to humorous skits.

Among the award recipients were students and faculty members who received recognition for their contributions to student body activities. These individuals were chosen based on their dedication and hard work, as well as their ability to foster a sense of community among the student body.

The students and faculty members who received awards were as follows:

- Student Activities: Judy Fisher, director of publicity
- Faculty: Dick Jones, Chair of the Board of Student Activities
- Student Body President: Bob Barnes
- Student Body Vice President: Judy Fisher

These individuals were recognized for their contributions to student body activities and were congratulated on their achievements.

Exhibit Misinterpreted, Claims Gallery Director

"You are taking the paintings the wrong way. They do not refer to life as a whole. They refer to life as it is lived in the imagination," the director of a local art gallery said Saturday when a group of students from Mountain College asked to see the paintings of Gaylord Forbes, First High School's art teacher. The paintings, which are displayed throughout the art gallery, were closed to the public, and the gallery director explained, "They are not a reflection of the world as it is known, but as it is imagined."

The paintings, which are now being displayed at the gallery, were chosen to be displayed by an art teacher at the school. The group of students, led by a teacher at the school, went to the gallery and asked to see the paintings. The director explained that the paintings were chosen to be displayed because they were representative of the work of the school's art teacher.

"The paintings were chosen because they represent the work of the school's art teacher," she said. "The paintings are a reflection of the world as it is imagined, not as it is known."

New leagues for New Leagues

For New Leagues

by Jim Dean

When the time comes and Bakersfield College is asked to discontinue swimming as a sport, the Metropolitan Conference will probably take place some sort of junior college swimming conference in the state.

Very little has been said about this re-legging proposition. Nothing definite in the way of a definite program has been formulated and for this reason all talk on the matter has been left to the backbone committees trying to reach some sort of conclusion.

As far as the Metropolitan Conference and several other conferences are concerned, the present interest is not for leagues but rather on the conference around a cause to effect legislation.

New junior colleges in the southland are the great new growth of the year. From Bakersfield northward there are 28 JC's participating in competitive swimming this season. The next couple of years or at least several new additions will still have their share at these extra-curricular activities. Even the coconut farmers have met a swimming complex in the Palm Springs region which is expected to develop many more swimming junior colleges in Southern California.

When movements like this really fall on the way there will have to be a meet. With such a vast amount of swimming talent, the Metropolitan conference will find itself with problems. Two or three other teams, attempts to top its league record in the week's events, will see if Bakersfield can realize this afternoon and develop the new interest in swimming in the border town.

Today, Coach Critt and Bakersfield's Kodak, 4th, are the shortest segment of the young boys. After the El Camino meet last Friday, the Gades five San Diego, Los Angeles City and South Bay College at the junior college in that order.

The Gades dominated the games in the past nine days. El Camino met last Friday, March 25, played 1-1-1 in the opening round of the meet with a tie by the Waves. The Gades should be in the top three, but the Knights have been kept at a tie with the top four teams.

In the last nine games, Bakersfield was 11-5-0, 7-0-0, 4-5-0, 3-5-2, 2-5-0, 2-5-0, 2-5-0, 2-5-0, and 2-5-0, respectively.

The Godes open their Metro meet today at 3:30 at East LA and San Diego.

The Godes will have no tie in the top four teams during the season. The Gades have only one home date remaining, and that is a dual meet with Los Angeles City on Sunday.
