BC Will Host Area 5 Conference Tomorrow

Bakersfield College will host the California Junior College Student Government Association Area 5 conference tomorrow at 8:00 a.m. Rich Congriff, president, and also president of Area 5, met with the presidents of the other colleges of Area 5 last Friday, and plans were drawn up for the operation of the conference.

Congriff said, "The Area 5 Conference is for the student governments and club representatives of the junior colleges in Area 5 to gather and discuss current problems, questions and ideas from their schools. In this way, we can all benefit from each other.

"Because of the importance of discussion, the conference will employ a unique format, with no parliamentary procedure, during the workshops held by the groups. To take place of the workshops will be seminars.

"Several different seminars will be held throughout the day. Prominent topics among them will be: hippies, campan radicals, the current social struggle, and the junior college student." According to Congriff, this conference is an experiment in a seminar style of preparation of the junior colleges in Area 5.

"If the Area 5 conference goes well, Congriff said that similar conferences with different topics and areas of focus may be used for the state conference.

"Included among the 50 delegates from the BC Area 5 will be representatives from the junior colleges in the area.

The Dodô Bird Lives!

Representatives presently residing on the Activities Board are largely a collection of college freshmen who plague most clubs at TC. They attend the meetings simply because it is a requirement for full club membership. Since attendance is mandatory for all clubs, those afflicted with the chore are obligatly to attend. Thus the Activities Board, whose purpose is to provide leisure opportunities for public relations and social activities on campus, has become aBC's government close by.

Visiting colleges to the Area 5 conference last Saturday found the board striving through, although the individual clubs had many of the same problems that have plagued them in the past. They have been working on "effective" representatives for coordinating club communications is like relying on soap to make an assembly of elec- tions being equally crucial.

There, to protect the efficient and student-oriented government, most colleges have formed Inter-Club Councils, or the equivalent. These councils are comprised of the presidents of the clubs, and the ASB vice president. Their function is the same as the board at TC. These groups are more stu- dents because the presidents, the elected leaders of the clubs, meet at the meetings instead of picked representatives.

It's ironic that BC has an organization capable of making decisions in a year's time and has the board system as the organization it is. It is also typical of BC that this organization is powerless.

Familiar with the board, comprised of the presidents of the clubs, has no governing power, only advisory. Although it may make recommendations to the Activities Board, the disputing clubs may carry them out. As last week's Board of Representatives meeting, an amendment to the constitution was introduced that would eliminate the sufficient Activities Board and give the powers to President's Roundtable, which would then be chaired by the ASB president.

"However, with action that has rank as one of the biggest bumbles in the history of the Board of Reps, proposed amendments would provide that club officers were to be more invasive, not less active, than ever," President Board unanimously supported the amendment.

The other opposition, which was led by Greg Smith, ASB business manager, and Bill Wolf, Freshman class president, seemed to overlook the obvious ad- vantages of the amendment and the benefits which could be gained by the extended board body. The new board would provide training for the presi- dents which would enable them to conduct more efficient club meetings, fulfills the student's needs.

They overlooked the fact that the club presidents could become more efficient club leaders, and provide for more efficient and well-developed leadership in ASB positions. It all boils down to the fact that Board of Representatives made a decision that will make more sense for the winter than it did for the spring.

Area Five...

The new amendment and the approval of the amendment for fall of 1967 will have a wide impact on the Board of Representatives. The conference of today was classified as the one of many meetings that will be held at the state confer-

Bettelheim Says Prejudice Is Caused By Immaturity

"Must Be Treated Like Childhood Disease"

Dr. Bruno Bettelheim, a noted authority on the subject of prejudice, has written a book that is expected to be a best-seller. The book, titled "The Use of Children in the Formation of Prejudice," is expected to be a major contribution to the field of social psychology.

Dr. Bettelheim's book is based on his extensive research and his work with children. He has found that children are more likely to develop prejudices if they are exposed to certain types of social interactions. He has also found that children who are exposed to prejudiced behavior are more likely to develop prejudices themselves.

In his book, Dr. Bettelheim argues that prejudice is caused by immaturity. He believes that children need to be treated like children before they can be treated as adults. He believes that children need to be protected from prejudiced behavior and that adults need to be held responsible for the prejudices that they teach to children.

Dr. Bettelheim's book is expected to be a major contribution to the field of social psychology. It is sure to be a best-seller and is expected to be widely read.

"I don't know how many stories I've written, but I can guarantee it's more than any other story I've ever written." And that's just the beginning of his writing career.

"This article is part of a larger project I'm working on about high school students," he said. "I've interviewed many of them, and I've found that many of them are not satisfied with their experiences at Waveny. They say that the school is too focused on academics and not enough on extracurricular activities."

Thornton also said that he's planning to write a novel about high school students and their experiences. "I think that's a good idea, and I'm thinking of doing it," he said. "I've read a lot of books about high school, and I think that's a good idea." And that's just the beginning of his writing career.

Present Method Of Traffic
Conservation

Although there have been no recent traffic accidents, the concern for traffic safety is still high. The present system of traffic conservation is based on the principle of minimizing the number of vehicles that are present in the area at any given time. This is achieved through the use of traffic lights, which control the flow of traffic at intersections. The traffic lights are placed at strategic points where vehicles are most likely to encounter each other.

John Reid, director of highway construction, stated, "The present method of traffic conservation is based on the principle of minimizing the number of vehicles that are present in the area at any given time. This is achieved through the use of traffic lights, which control the flow of traffic at intersections. The traffic lights are placed at strategic points where vehicles are most likely to encounter each other."

At 5:00 a.m. March 11, Claire Beaumont made her last visit to Balboa College. Before she could close the door, she asked her son, "Are you going to be all right?"

"Yes, Mom," he answered.

"Somebody's going to be disappointed today," Claire said.

"Who?"

"The Dodo!"

Dodo was Claire's pet parakeet. Claire bought him when he was a baby, and now he's a big bird and quite talkative. He was on Claire's mind until she had to go to the store.

Naturally, Claire took Dodo with her.

On her way home, she saw a report on the news about the death of the Dodo. Claire gasped and grabbed Dodo, who was perched on her shoulder.

"It's not the real Dodo," Claire said. "But I feel so bad for his owner."

"I'm sorry," Dodo said. "I thought it was the real one."

‘Prostitute’ Makes Last BC Visit

By Jane Davis

At 9:30 a.m. March 11, a woman who had been convicted of prostitution made her last visit to Balboa College. She was wearing a black dress and carrying a purse.

"I'm sorry," she said. "I know I shouldn't be here."

"It's okay," the college president said. "We're here to help you."

"I'm just going to take a look and see if there's anything I can do," she said.

The college president showed her around the campus and explained the various programs available.

"I'm really sorry," the woman said. "I wish I could do something to help."

"There are many ways to help," the college president said. "You could volunteer, or you could donate money."

"I'll think about it," the woman said. "Thank you."
