Wallace Potential Considered

Who will be the next president of the United States? Many people are asking this question as the presidential primary season comes to an end. The biggest upset of the primary season was the announcement by President Johnson that he will not seek re-election in November. Other candidates are asking pertinent questions in the developments, especially Eugene McCarthy, Robert Kennedy, and the Republicans, "Richard Nixon. One possibility, though, which should not be overlooked, is the potential standing of candidates George Wallace, the former Governor of Alabama, on the Western states, and Senator Eugene McCarthy, Democratic presidential hopeful, to be in Bakerfield tomorrow at 2:00 p.m. at the Empire Ballroom. While Senator McCarthy's staff has not yet been able to disclose whether the Senator himself will appear at the rally, his aide has confirmed that he will be in the city to gain support for his anti-war campaign.

Wallace's chief ambitions is to return the party to its former glory. Many contend that the major problem in getting this done is to develop their own policies, even without federal intervention.

One of Wallace's most consistent stands is on civil rights. A policy aligned with his state's, Wallace has taken a strong stand on the issue. The fact that many of his followers have been listen- ing to a TV huron, a former "antientropologist, who thinks that the Negroes are inferior to whites. Others, however, indicate that he is not as a black, but simply a symbol. Many Wallace supporters believe that the problem with biracial is that the trick is to have the "black and white" races live apart. In their minds, there must be different systems for each race. White: Wallace has not actually talked of race differences, his segregated schools in Alabama are a good indication of his beliefs.

In the past few years, as the federal government has increased its efforts in the integration of the South, Wallace has been under attack. His major claim has been that states do not have their own way. While this policy may sound good, it is important to re- check the policies of the southern states. People still remember the church burning in Birmingham, Alabama, several years ago, in which four young Negro girls were brutally killed in a group of 14. The actions of the Ku Klux Klan have been brought out, and "gruesome" stories of murder and burning civil rights workers. It was vital for whites to change their minds regarding Wallace's government policies.

Wallace's views on Vietnam were even more unusual than his civil rights platform. He has said on many occasions that the United States is involved in Vietnam and, right or wrong, the actions of the troops must be supported. All those who are in this war have been thought to be better. If the world is not at peace, there must be more action and the war should continue.
Editorial

McCarthy

The Renegade Rip supports Eugene McCarthy in his bid for the Presidency of the United States and urges college students to be present this Saturday. McCarthy is the only candidate who the editorial board believes will give the people voice once again.

Amidst news accounts prior to the President's election, McCarthy's success in New Hampshire. His strong showing in this primary is only the first step in his presidential campaign. McCarthy’s victory is still in doubt, and his campaign needs the help of all Americans who believe in his message of peace and reform.

McCarthy’s victory in New Hampshire is a significant step. He has demonstrated his ability to win in a state that is considered a bellwether for presidential elections. His success in New Hampshire is a testament to his ability to connect with voters and to mobilize a grassroots movement.

McCarthy’s campaign is not just about winning an election. It is about bringing the people together to create a new vision for our country. His message of peace and reform resonates with millions of Americans who are tired of the status quo and who are ready for change.

The Renegade Rip supports McCarthy because he offers a different vision for our country. He is a leader who understands the challenges we face as a nation and who is committed to working with the American people to create a brighter future.

Let’s clean up ‘SMUT’

The news media in America today, both liberal and conservative, is filled with images of corruption and scandal. The media, however, is not the only source of these images. They are also present in our daily lives, from the media we consume to the way we interact with others. The problem is that these images are often not accurate reflections of reality.

In the past, the media has been seen as a source of truth and reliability. However, in recent years, the media has come under scrutiny for its role in shaping public opinion and for its role in spreading misinformation.

The problem is that the media is not always a reliable source of information. In fact, the media is often used as a tool to promote certain agendas and to suppress others. This is especially true in times of political crises, when the media is used to create fear and division.

As we continue to navigate a world that is increasingly complex and uncertain, it is important that we remain vigilant and critical of the information we receive. We must be willing to question what we see and hear, and to seek out multiple sources of information.

Let’s clean up ‘SMUT’ and ensure that the media is a tool for truth and reliability, rather than a tool for propaganda and manipulation.
Wallace...

Even though the views of Wallace and his students are widely varied, one of his policies does not involve a second and is to restrict the times that people can move about on the campus. Most students favor this policy, but some argue that it is not good for the school's image. However, the restrictions are not always followed by the students, who often find ways to circumvent them.

Advantage of Quarter Plan

Under study by the administration at the present time are various educational programs, including the quarter system. This system would require students to take four courses each quarter instead of the usual eight courses each semester. The college believes that this system would provide more flexibility for students and allow them to play in the study of their choice.

Dear Mr. McNichol,

I believe some of the sentiments you expressed recently in the O.C. Register are true. In particular, the notion that "people are getting out of the world of politics" seems to be gaining traction across the nation. This is particularly true in Orange County, where the political climate has been increasingly polarized and contentious.

However, I do not believe that the future of politics is necessarily bleak. On the contrary, I think there is a growing sense of frustration with the status quo, and a desire for change from those who do care about the issues. This is evident in the increased turnout in local elections, and the emergence of new voices and perspectives in the political discourse.

I urge you to reconsider your decision to step away from politics. While it may be tempting to retreat from the fray, I believe that the work of public service is essential to the health of our democracy. Together, we can work to bridge the divides and find common ground, and make a real difference in the lives of the people we serve.

Sincerely,
[Your Name]
VISTA Obtains Financial Aid

In the wake of a $12 million federal aid package and a total of $8 million in state and private contributions, Volunteers In Service To America (VISTA) is now available for the 60,000 out-of-work people in the United States. The agency was established by the Economic Opportunity Act of 1964 and has an opportunity to benefit from the recent legislation. However, the organization's purpose is not only to provide jobs for people but to stimulate the economy as well. The organization has been faced with criticism from some who claim it is a job program with a profit motive. However, VISTA is trying to prove that it is not only a job program but also a program that helps to address the root causes of poverty.

The formation of the organization was marked by the signing of a bill into law on April 18, 1964, by President Lyndon B. Johnson. The bill provided $8 million for VISTA's operations. The agency was to be made up of 10,000 volunteers who would be assigned to various projects throughout the country. The volunteers would be recruited from a list of 60,000 people who had been identified as being eligible for the program.

The agency has been faced with criticism from some who claim it is a job program with a profit motive. However, VISTA is trying to prove that it is not only a job program but also a program that helps to address the root causes of poverty.

Chavez got a bad break last year during the second semester when he hurt his neck the first match of the semester and he didn't get to wrestle any more.
