EC Offers Live-In Situation, Tutoring, Research, Seminars

The Experimental College Committee announced yesterday, the offering of a new group seminar class consisting of group seminars, independent research, individual tutoring, and a monthly "live-in" situation and three units of credit.

The newly titled Philosophy 301, Arts in Western Civilization, for which the class is now being offered, has been changed, and course content and organization will be jointly determined by group and independent research.

Qualified students who sign up for the class will meet each Thursday, afternoon and evening, between 3 and 5 p.m. Three hours of instruction will be included, along with a dinner served through the Home Economics building. The remaining two times will be for group discussion and independent research.

"Pastoral commuter" along the lines of the present Orientation Five courses, this class will allow students to receive three units in an experimental situation while participating in an unstructured course.

Major concentrations of the course will be in the "social sciences," the humanities and philosophy, and the arts. Students will choose among the students enrolled.

The group will have the opportunity to plan the variety of activities related to the learning process, such as trips to Los Angeles or San Francisco, plays, movies, or other entertainments and individual commitment will produce an outstanding educational experience.

The Committee, comprised of faculty administration and students, will meet several times in the planning stages of the course and hopes to expand the program to one semester by next year, providing this program produces good results.

Previously there had been no restrictions on the number of participants for each office. The requirements for candidacy are listed under Article II, Section 3 of the S.A. Constitution. The Constitution states, "To be eligible to run for an S.A. office, a student must have at least a 2.3 grade point average in at least 12 units as determined by his mid-term or semester grades, whichever are more recent."

Clause 6 states, "The President, Vice-President and Business Manager of the Associated Students, and the Chair, A.B. of the Associated Students must be an attendee at attendance at Ball State College at least once every two semesters prior to serving in office."

Under Article VIII, Section 3, any student who meets the requirements for office and who desires to run must file the necessary application with the Student Court at least one week before the election.

After a great deal of controversy regarding the date of the ASB elections, the day has been officially announced. The voting will take place next Tuesday, at which time students may select their candidate for this semester's S.A. office.

This year's ASB elections should prove to be exciting. There are eight potential positions to be filled and prospective candidates are running for all but one of the offices.

The offices and representatives of the students are: President, David Bruce; Vice-Chair, John King; Clerk, John Smitherman; Secretary, Tony Garcia; Secretary, Barbara Whistler; Associate Justice, Steve Sakas; Chief Justice, Chuck Poucher; Dean, Keith Warren; and Armando Sanchez.

"C.C. studies Grade Policy"

The Campus Advisory Committee is currently revising the grading procedure at Ball State College as a result of student protest over the assessment system.

The student faculty administration board hoped to present their proposal to the students before the end of the semester, but a new grading system was put in place because the present system was not satisfactory for the students.

The basic policy of the grading system is that each student should have four quarters, and the grades earned in those quarters will be evaluated and each of which will be marked by the addition of an extra semester.

The policy is currently being finalized and will be presented to the students.

Opinion Poll

Quarter System Applauded

What do you think of the quarter system? A recent poll shows that the majority of students prefer the quarter system for a number of reasons.

The Activities Board on October 2 decided in order to make the Hospitalization Convention more meaningful that "two and only two students, would appear on the general ballot and these students would be chosen at the nominating convention." It has been questioned since then whether the Activities Board actually has the power to make such a decision. It has also been questioned whether the student court can override an Activities Board decision.

It is about time a clear division of power was defined. Who has the power? Where does it come from? Where is it stated?

Both the court and the board have been accused through the semester of offering little leadership or none at all. Now is a time to establish that hierarchy.

Besides getting a peasant with a clear division of power the court hearing has a significant affect on the activities board's ASB and class elections.

If the court decided the Activities Board was within its powers (whether or not to regulate the elections) the board might proceed to do anything it thought the ballot might be changed by just signing up for getting a petition together are out of luck - they won't even be on the ballot.

At the other end of the pole, if the court decided the Activities Board was unconstitutional in its actions, it is deterring the people on the ballot.

If they decide students can run now by just getting on the ballot this is a clear and constitutional. Can candidates get on the ballot by signing the sheet after the signs are up? In other words how about a clear division of power here?

What should have been a significant change in the elections has been a clear-cut victory in the massaging of the ballot and political-artifice. let us hope the student court makes a wise decision.

In The Round Drama Will Be Presented

"Look How The October is Blown And He Was Going To Join Us But He Was Only Here For A Day. To stay on 12, I have been looking for the majestic, you know, something..."

In this passage from William Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet," the poet's use of metaphor and personification creates a vivid picture of the plight of the Bard's characters. The phrase "look how the October is blown" is a metaphor for the brevity of life, while the image of the "majestic" is a personification of the character's aspirations.

Larry Distel is on the phone now. He is going to his office to see us about the paper. "Disjointed drama,..."

In one short week, the Associated Student Body government structure has almost completely broken down as a result of a combination of events.

First, the student body has completely lost confidence in its elected leaders. This was demonstrated when the SAB members were approached to submit plots indicating support for several of their platforms. Only 30 of the members showed up for the meeting. This was a significant drop from the previous year's turnout, which was approximately 60 members. The SAB members were visibly upset by this lack of support and expressed concern about the future of the government.

Gades Lose to Valley
Dribblers Bounce First Two, Lose 1; Next Rio Hondo

Tonight in the BC gym the Gades found their record at 0-2 after losing to Mid Valley High School, 80-76. Valley was led by John Jones with 19 points, followed by his teammate Rodger McKee with 16 points. For the Gades, Steve Smith scored 18 points, while Tony Garcia added 11 points.

Valley Team Plan Two

After leading for most of the game, the Gades pulled away from Valley in the final minutes. Valley continued to fight back, but the Gades' lead proved too much to overcome. The final score was 80-76 in favor of Valley High School.

Karate Exhibition

The BC Student Council of Karate presented a demonstration of their skills in the BC gym. The BC council of Karate has been training for over a year and is well known for their impressive skills. The exhibition featured a variety of moves, including blocking, punching, and kicks, showcasing the dedication and discipline of the BC council of Karate.

Predictions Come True!

By TONY GARCIA

Despite rumors made about my predictions in a recent publication on campus, if you can believe the Gades did beat the Vikings and went on to dump El Centro. In fact, all of last week's predictions were correct except for one point, that was LA Valley, 81-65, and Santa Monica, 81-62. Fear Future?

Thus, I will continue to predict since I have no past to cry over and only a future to see - the BC CATACOMB. This Friday, BC will make a comeback against Rio Hondo. Valley will pump east up LA, Centrinos will just squeeze by Long Beach.
