The Mexican-American and black student union members visit the Associated Students' rip office to protest Robin's editorial.

Several members of the black and Mexican student unions visited the ASO office Thursday afternoon to protest the Associated Students' Bakersfield California Junior College newspaper editor's recent editorial.

Robin's editorial was written in response to a recent and controversial Associated Students' resolution that demanded, among other things, an immediate investigation into the possibility of the looming crisis in the Associated Students' Council because 1) an increasing number of Associated Students' members are not participating in Associated Students' activities, 2) Associated Students' members are not voting on Associated Students' resolutions, and 3) Associated Students' members have not participated in Associated Students' activities.

Robin's editorial was written in response to the Associated Students' resolution, which was written by the Associated Students' Council in response to the Associated Students' members' lack of participation in Associated Students' activities.

About last Friday...

By: Chris Hamilton

As the last Friday of the quarter comes to an end, I would like to address an issue which has not been addressed by the student body in the past.

A few weeks ago, a student of this university stated that he would prefer if the university would not allow dogs on campus. This student truly believes that having dogs on campus is a bad idea. He believes that they are a threat to the campus community, and he would actually prefer having no animals on campus. He was made aware of the university’s animal policies, and he found them to be acceptable.

I believe that this student is wrong. First of all, he should be more considerate of the people who own dogs, and the fact that they are on campus in the first place is due to the policies of this university, which are there to protect the people who own dogs. Second, dogs are not a threat to the campus.

The student who made the comment was not the only one who made such a statement. I have heard many students make similar comments, and they all seem to agree that they do not want dogs on campus.

This is not only a matter of opinion. The university has a policy that prohibits dogs on campus. The policy is in place to protect the people who own dogs, and the university knows that the policy is in place to protect the people who own dogs.

I believe that the university should do more to protect the people who own dogs. The policy should be changed to allow dogs on campus.

For more information on this issue, please contact the university’s animal policy committee. They can be reached at (555) 555-5555.

Contemporary And Old Art
In Frames Is Very Square

by John Halsey

I found the visual artistry of the frames as I was walking around the art department. I had never seen such a variety of styles.

The exhibition features works
by many different artists,
including paintings, sculptures,
and installation pieces. There is everything from abstract
artwork to realistic depictions of people and objects.

The artists use a variety of techniques and materials to create their pieces. Some of them use traditional methods
while others experiment with new materials and techniques.

The exhibition is open to the public and runs until the end of the semester. It is located in the art building on the second floor. I highly recommend checking it out!

I was born.

And John was born, in that room, in that hospital, and then we moved across the country and lived in a house with a big yard and a dog, and we played and read and listened to music. And the dog was big and the music was loud and the world was exciting and we were young and we had nothing to do but make it happen.

Desert Campus Plans Summer Session From Student Survey

The desert campus of Bakersfield College is planning a summer session this year based on a survey of student needs. The survey, conducted by the campus council, showed that most students wanted a shorter session, with a focus on general education courses. The council has recommended that the session be held in June and July, with classes held on weekends.

Oh When Those Saints Go Marching Out

As a student at the University of California, I have been impressed with the dedication of the faculty and staff. The recent decision to eliminate 700 faculty positions has been met with mixed reactions. While some are concerned about the impact on the quality of education, others argue that the university can afford to make these cuts.

Letters To The Editor

Dear Editor:

I am writing to express my concern about the recent decision to eliminate 700 faculty positions at the University of California. While I understand the need to reduce costs, I believe it is important to maintain the high standards of education provided by the university.

Sincerely,

We read your opinion of April 30th, which expressed the opinion that BC males would not fuss with themselves or wear strange clothing. As a student here at this college, I cannot agree with your statement. The so-called 'Sacred Cow' theories are full of fallacy.

SPEAKS ON ADMINISTRATION POLICIES

Guest column--ASB President

I am writing to discuss the administration of the college and some policies of the administration. The administration seems to be out to get rid of the student body. They have increased the price of the passes and there is a shortage of buses. In order to cut down on the student body, they have increased the price of lunch and are charging 2.00 a day. These actions are not conducive to the betterment of the student body.

GROUP DRAWS STARES FROM IGNORAMUSES

by Chad Johnson

The group of students who have been seen wandering the campus and drawing stares from 'ignoramuses' is a group of students who are not aware of the policies and procedures of the college. They should have been sent to the office of the Dean of Admissions and been advised of the policies and procedures of the college.
