Art, Photography To Highlight Concert

In past years the Renegade Rip, under the direction of Charles Wood, has been well known for its recent progress on the western edge and the oldest of this year which is more for the Saturday night at 8 p.m. in the College Theatre. There's an admission charge.

The Second Annual Concert will feature the following groups:

1. "The Barberettes" from Wood, directed by Joan Today, will be in concert with a program of spirituals, which features Negro Spirituals, spirituals, and Negro Spirituals.

2. "The Negro Spiritual Singers" from the United States. They will be in concert with their program of Negro Spirituals and Negro Spirituals.

3. "The College Choir" from the United States. They will be in concert with their program of Negro Spirituals and Negro Spirituals.

4. "The College Choir" from the United States. They will be in concert with their program of Negro Spirituals and Negro Spirituals.

SCENE 1: The program begins with "The Barberettes" who are in black, singing their spirituals. They are accompanied by a piano player who is also in black. The crowd is seated on bleachers, listening intently.

SCENE 2: "The Negro Spiritual Singers" take the stage next, dressed in traditional black attire. They sing a spiritual, with a powerful voice and a lot of energy.

SCENE 3: The College Choir steps up next, and their performance is a showcase of harmony and precision. They sing a spiritual with a powerful voice, and the crowd is visibly moved.

SCENE 4: "The College Choir" takes the stage once again, this time singing a spiritual with even more intensity. The audience is on its feet, clapping and cheering.

SCENE 5: The Barberettes return, this time singing a dance number. They are dressed in vibrant colors, and their performance is lively and fun.

SCENE 6: "The Negro Spiritual Singers" close the show with another spiritual, this time accompanied by a group of cellists who add an extra layer of depth to the performance.

The audience is left with a sense of reverence and community, and the concert ends with a standing ovation.
If You Vote At All, Vote YES

On May 7 Baltimore will be the site of a major referendum to end the system of local government. If the people of the city vote in favor of a strong mayor form of government, the city will have its first mayor. If they vote against it, the city will continue with the same old system.

The question before the voters is whether or not to accept the proposed charter. The charter, which is the document that outlines the structure of local government, has been the subject of much debate and discussion. It is designed to provide for better government by reducing the number of elected officials from 13 to 7 and by giving the mayor more power.

The charter was the result of a long and difficult process. It was developed by a committee of citizens who were appointed by the mayor and the city council. The committee held public hearings and received input from many different groups. The charter was then submitted to the city council, which voted to send it to the voters for approval.

The charter has been the subject of much controversy. Some people have argued that it will make the city government more efficient and effective. Others have argued that it will lead to corruption and mismanagement. The outcome of the referendum is likely to have a major impact on the future of Baltimore.
