BC anti-war faction frustrated

By RICHARD HUTTON

BC anti-war members expressed their dismay and disappointment at the University Senate's decision on Friday to allow war propaganda to be displayed on the campus.

"We were very disappointed," said Sara Bachman, a member of the BC anti-war faction. "We feel that the University Senate's decision is a violation of student rights and a breach of the democratic process."

The BC anti-war faction has been active on the campus for several months, organizing protests and rallies against the war in Vietnam. Their efforts have been met with resistance from the University administration, who have rejected their requests for a formal student organization and have blocked their attempts to hold peaceful demonstrations.

The University Senate's decision to allow war propaganda to be displayed on the campus is seen by many as a blow to the anti-war movement. The faction has been working to raise awareness about the war and to build support for a peaceful resolution, and they fear that the decision will undermine their efforts.

The BC anti-war faction is planning to appeal the University Senate's decision and is considering legal options. They are also calling on the BC government to take action against the University Senate and to protect student rights.

Contemporary-concerns seminar

By MARY SEARS

A seminar on contemporary concerns, which is part of the BC anti-war faction's ongoing efforts to raise awareness about the war, will be held on Thursday, March 2. The seminar will feature speakers from across campus, including faculty members, students, and members of the local community.

The seminar will focus on the war in Vietnam and its impact on students and the university community. The speakers will discuss the war's effects on the economy, the environment, and the social fabric of BC.

The seminar is open to all members of the BC community, and the BC anti-war faction is encouraging everyone to attend and to contribute their thoughts and ideas.

Remember, everyone is entitled to his own opinion and to his own facts as long as he can show that those opinions and facts are the product of reason and not of corrupting influences.

By chance, I have visited a number of leading universities in the United States, and I am persuaded that the BC anti-war faction is dedicated to the pursuit of truth and the promotion of peace. They are accomplishing a great deal for their cause, and they should be commended for their efforts.

The BC anti-war faction is an example of what can be achieved through the power of education and the passion for justice. They are a shining example of the value of a free and open society, and they are a source of inspiration for all those who believe in the power of knowledge to change the world.
