Robb Walt: an essential part of education

By MANUEL FUENTES

Robb Walt, who has been named this year’s "Who’s Who" in education, is an essential part of the educational system, but he is also a vital part of the Bakersfield College campus.

"Robb is not only a respected faculty member, he is a mentor to many students," said Professor Mark Gross. "He is an invaluable asset to our campus community and a true role model for our students."

Walt has been teaching at Bakersfield College for over 20 years and has been a driving force in the development of the Inner Eye Pond project. He has also been an active member of the Social Activities Committee, where he has contributed significantly to the organization of various events.

In addition to his teaching duties, Walt has been involved in the development of the campus facilities, including the construction of the Inner Eye Pond. He has also been involved in the planning and execution of various campus events, including the annual "Who’s Who" in Education celebration.

Walt is a respected member of the college community and is highly regarded by his colleagues and students alike. His dedication to education and his commitment to the development of the campus community are truly inspiring.

CTA will fight federal cutbacks

The California Teachers Association (CTA) has announced that it will fight federal cutbacks to education funding. The announcement was made by President Jack O’Reilly during a press conference at the CTA headquarters in Los Angeles.

O’Reilly said that the cuts would have a devastating impact on public education and that the association would not stand idly by.

"We will not let the federal government cut funding to our schools," said O’Reilly. "We will fight back with every tool at our disposal to ensure that our students receive the best education possible."

The cuts are expected to result in a reduction of federal funding for education by $25 billion over the next five years. The cuts are part of a larger package of budget cuts that have been proposed by President Trump.

CTA has already launched a campaign to mobilize its members and to encourage them to contact their elected officials to oppose the cuts. The association has also called for a national day of action on April 10 to protest the cuts.

Burrud bases show on facts

Any story about a particular subject, whether it be a current event or a historical event, should be based on facts. Such is the advice given by Burrud, the new master of ceremonies for the show "Inner Eye Pond," located on the Bakersfield College campus.

"I want to make sure that everyone in the audience understands that all the information presented during the show is based on facts," said Burrud. "We will not present any information that is not backed up by evidence."
Hitchhiking problems

Two weeks ago all of us signed a petition to boycott a planned bus trip to the area.

The petition was met with mixed feelings within the student body. Some supported the boycott because they felt that the trip was an unnecessary expense. Others were opposed to the boycott because they believed that it would be disruptive to the school schedule.

Despite the mixed opinions, the boycott went forward. The bus trip was cancelled, and the students involved in the boycott were commended for their efforts.

A graduate student at the University of California, Berkeley, who is studying the history of transportation, stated that this boycott was a significant event in the history of student activism. He said that it was the first time that students had successfully used a boycott to remove a planned event from the school calendar.

The success of the boycott has led to a surge in interest in student activism at the University of California, Berkeley. Students are now considering other boycotts, including a boycott of the university's food service.

P. E. unnecessary

In his latest column, P. E. argues that physical education classes are unnecessary for students. In his opinion, physical education classes are a waste of time and money.

P. E. states that physical education classes are not necessary because modern society is already sedentary. He argues that if students want to be healthy, they should simply choose to be active. He also claims that physical education classes are often taught by unqualified teachers who are not able to teach the necessary skills.

P. E. concludes his column by stating that physical education classes should be abolished and replaced with a focus on health education.

Calendar change disadvantages

A proposed calendar change for the 1972-73 school year was met with mixed opinions from students and faculty.

Some students favored the calendar change because they believed that it would provide more vacation time. Others were opposed to the change because they believed that it would disrupt their plans for future summer jobs.

The faculty members who supported the calendar change argued that it would allow them more time to prepare for the upcoming school year. They also believed that it would provide more time for student participation in extracurricular activities.

Those who opposed the change argued that it would be disruptive to the school schedule and would cause students and faculty members to be unprepared for the upcoming school year.

WASP's discriminated against

Recently, there have been reports of discrimination against WASPs (White Anglo-Saxon Protestants) in the area.

The University of California, Berkeley, has received complaints from several WASPs who claim that they have been discriminated against.

The university has launched an investigation into the allegations and has promised to take appropriate action if discrimination is found.

Students do volunteer work for Soc. 5

The students of the University of California, Berkeley, have been participating in volunteer work for the Social Science 5 Program.

The program is part of a larger effort to provide social services to the local community.

The students have been working with a variety of organizations, including a local shelter for the homeless and a community center for elderly people.

The students have been using their skills and knowledge to make a positive impact on the community.

Jazz bands receive ovations

Jazz bands from various colleges and universities are scheduled to perform at the annual Monterey Jazz Festival.

The festival is considered one of the most prestigious jazz events in the country.

A variety of jazz bands are expected to perform at the festival, including the University of California, Berkeley, Jazz Ensemble and the Stanford University Jazz Ensemble.

Rosen reported that the meeting turned into a spirited debate over the inclusion of student activities, and presented four options for resolving the issue. The options included: (1) allowing student organizations to maintain their existing bank accounts, (2) consolidating all student group funds into a single account, (3) providing each student organization with a separate account, or (4) eliminating the bank accounts altogether. Students expressed mixed reactions to the proposals, with some argueing for the preservation of individual accounts to ensure transparency and accountability, while others favored consolidation to streamline financial management.

Tankers lose 56-48 to Warriors

By ANDREW NORMAN

At Memorial Stadium:

The Bakersfield College basketball team suffered a 56-48 loss to the San Joaquin Delta College Warriors in the opening round of the BC Invitational. The game was a heated contest, with both teams playing to the very end. The Warriors capitalized on their experience and physicality, outscoring the Carpenters 30-16 in the second half. Head Coach Mike Carter acknowledged the Warriors' superior defensive play, stating, "They played a good game and we didn't respond well in the second half.

Parking solution in offering

For years, BC students have been facing parking challenges. However, the BC administration is taking steps to address this issue. The BC parking department is exploring the possibility of implementing a new parking system that would allocate specific parking spots for students, faculty, and staff. This initiative aims to reduce congestion and make the parking experience more convenient for all BC community members.

Free clinic proposed

If you are not sure about what to do about that bad cold or a sore throat, or if you have a general malaise, consider visiting the clinic. You can get your temperatures taken, receive X-rays, and be given medication for a variety of ailments.

Due to the high cost of medical care, the clinic is intended to be a low-cost alternative to going to the doctor. It is located on the campus of the local university and is open every day of the week.

Homecoming loses interest

The enthusiasm of homecoming activities at a university is often lackluster, according to the following statements of university officials.

In the past, homecoming had been a major event at the university, but it has become less popular in recent years. The reasons for this are not entirely clear, but some believe that the cost of participation is a factor.

One official said, "The cost of participating in homecoming activities has gone up, and students are no longer interested in paying for it." Another added, "The activities themselves have become less exciting, and students are not willing to put in the effort."
Reader: talented triple jumper

By LARRY ROHNS

In some ways you can become a superstar by using your untrained ability. In the triple jump it takes a lot of both.

Robert Reader, a student at BC, is such a student. The triple jump is his specialty. Reader has only been using his natural talent in this event for about ten years. Before that he was known as the big, strong, jumping and running type of student. But ten years ago Reader began to take the triple jump and the age of great triple jumpers began. A student with 38 feet would have been a star ten years ago but would not place in today's meets. Add that to Reader's ability and he will jump and become a professional in a few years and make a lot of the top American jumpers.

Reader's favorite jump地点 is in the 33-34 range, he is a threat to win the triple jump events this year. "I can count on myself. Anytime I jump over 30 I do not fail."

Reader feels he can jump up to 35 at the Olympic trials. Reader recently attended the U.S. Olympic trials in Virginia. Reader has won some competitions in the triple jump. In these events Reader either placed first or second.

Reader says, "You gain knowledge and perfect it. Your performance can make a difference."

In the beginning triple jump training is the most important thing because you are jumping and running.ходя на овал]

In addition, Reader feels that the triple jump is not a sport. He says, "I don't jump in practice, you might start yourself or pick on old bulls.

So far this year, if you can score ten years in practice and compute and then have a trip you should be great.

Berkley Reader, a senior at BC College, is Reader's twin brother. Reader's performance in the triple jump has him at 34 feet.
