$1.7 million budget cut may force tuition
BC's budget squeezed in power play

By ROBB LIGHTFOOT
Staff Writer

The Kent Community College District loses a $1.7 million dollar cut under the new legislative act to raise funds helped by Gov. Dan Evans. They estimate the cuts amount to $1.7 million would come from the budget of BC according to Dr. Richard Wright, BC's presidnet.

The $1 million dollar reduction would result in a $50,000 savings for the 1984-85 budget. The $1 million cut is in the overall budget of the college.

"This is a huge blow to the college," says Wright. "We have to reduce districts to cut their budget and save."

When Reps. tried to stop them, Will Brown, Speaker of the Assembly and a Democrat, objected to the cuts on the惜part.

At this point, Dr. Duke, president of the President of the College, and is using the community college budget to force the President of the Board to reduce the college's budget. The President of the Board of the Republican administration.

Wright believes, it is why Dr. Duke's motion was rejected by the Board of the Republican administration. The Board felt the money would go to the community colleges and the local districts to go back on the voters, but Wright said the $1 million dollar cut was not the real story. The local districts were not the real story.

"I don't think the $1 million dollar cut is the real story. The Board of the Republican administration was trying to get the money back on the voters, but Wright said the $1 million dollar cut was not the real story. The local districts were not the real story."

Wright does not foresee the loss of eight classes, but he does anticipate the elimination of all part-time classes for a couple of years.

The Board of the Republican administration will have to make decisions on cuts. For the Board of the Republican administration, and the county educational reimbursement dollars that the Board of the Republican administration is trying to get back on the voters, but Wright said the $1 million dollar cut was not the real story. The local districts were not the real story.

The approval of this bill caught most administrators by surprise. The state charter's office issued the directive to the Republican administration today. The charter's office was not notified until August 21, the first day of school.

According to the charter's office, there has not been a bill similar to this one in the last few years. The charter's office said that the only reason for calling the charter's office was that the Republican administration had not been able to get a hearing on the bill.

The charter's office did not make any decisions on this bill today. The charter's office said that the Republican administration had not been able to get a hearing on the bill.

Since the deadline has already passed, the charter's office is taking no action on this bill. The charter's office is not aware of any additional information on this bill that would allow them to take any action.

Markets cautious students to drop courses formally.

Students who drop by decreasing the number of classes they are taking over the next few weeks. This is a suggestion that the charter's office is not aware of any additional information on this bill that would allow them to take any action.

"The market is never able to provide an accurate level of demand," said Wright. "They can only increase the demand, but they will find that the market is not as volatile as the product would have it."

Starting in September, BC's students are expected to take courses at a rate that is 50% lower than their current demand. This is a suggestion that the charter's office is not aware of any additional information on this bill that would allow them to take any action.

"The market is never able to provide an accurate level of demand," said Wright. "They can only increase the demand, but they will find that the market is not as volatile as the product would have it."

Wright said that the budget reduction has forced BC's administration to make some difficult decisions. The administration has already decided to cut the number of classes offered and to reduce the number of students enrolled.

"We've had to cut a class or two, we wouldn't do it," Wright said.

In short, Wright's goal is to keep BC's budget in line with the overall reduction in state funding. To achieve this, Wright has to make tough decisions on how to allocate the budget's resources.

The budget cuts will affect all areas of the college, including faculty salaries, course offerings, and facilities. Wright plans to work with the college's faculty and staff to find ways to reduce costs and maintain high-quality educational programs.

Wright is confident that BC can weather this budget cut and continue to provide a first-class education to its students. He believes that the college's strong financial position and its commitment to excellence will help it navigate this challenging time.

College daze: Why no warning?

By RICHARD WALTER

The college experience is often heralded as the most formative period of one's life. However, many students are left unprepared for the challenges they will face. College campuses are ripe with temptations, and students often find themselves struggling to stay on track.

To the editor:

I recently spoke to a group of students about college and the challenges they face. Many of them were surprised to learn that there is no formal support system in place to help them through this difficult time.

Collins, staff battling losses, still optimistic

By RICHARD DILLO

Sports Editor

Despite the loss of Renny Collins, the '83 BC football season formal begins tonight against Simon Fraser University at UBC's Thunderbird Stadium. The Renegades entered the fall with a 3-6-1 record and with the addition of a new head coach. No. 1 in the standings.

"This game looks like it will be a real battle," said Coach Collins. "Our staff is very optimistic about our season and we hope to build a team that can compete in the BC conference."

Collins, who has spent the past five years as an assistant coach at the University of British Columbia, replaces Dave Black, who was fired after last season's 2-5 record. Black's departure was announced last week.

The Renegades lost their top two receivers from last season, and Collins believes they can replace them with a strong group of options with graduated players.

"They gave a lot of good work in the room and on the field," Collins said. "We have some young players who can really step up in the starting lineup."

Trustees caught in ‘impossible situation’

Board hopes for state action this week

By ROGER LIGHTFOOT

The monthly meeting of the Kilgore College District Board of Trustees met last Monday in the Boardroom to consider the budget and other business.

The new budget will be submitted to the district’s advisory committee for review and approval. The committee will then present its recommendations to the Texas Education Agency (TEA) for final approval.

The budget process begins with the preparation of the district’s budget proposal, which includes estimates of revenue and expenditures for the upcoming fiscal year. The proposal is then reviewed by the district’s advisory committee, which considers input from the community and makes recommendations to the Board of Trustees. The Board then approves the budget and submits it to the TEA for final approval.

According to the TEA, the district must submit its budget proposal by September 21st. The TEA will then review the proposal and provide feedback, which the district must incorporate into the final budget. The final budget must be approved by the Board of Trustees by October 15th and submitted to the TEA by November 15th.

The district is expected to receive its final budget approval by December 1st. The budget will then be used to guide the district’s operations and financial planning for the upcoming fiscal year.

Budget graded lower than a ‘C’

By ROGER LIGHTFOOT

The district’s financial report for the fiscal year ended June 30, 2023, was reviewed by the Board of Trustees. The report showed that the district’s financial position was lower than expected, with the budget graded lower than a ‘C’.

The report indicated that the district had experienced a decrease in revenue, primarily due to a decline in enrollment. The budget was also impacted by increased costs, including higher salaries and benefits for employees and increased expenses for facilities maintenance.

The district is currently working on a plan to improve its financial position and ensure that the budget is balanced. This includes exploring ways to increase revenue, such as seeking additional grants and partnerships, and implementing cost-saving measures, such as reducing administrative overhead and improving efficiency in operations.

The district is committed to transparency and will continue to provide updates on its financial progress and budget performance. The district encourages community members to stay informed and engaged in the budget process and to provide feedback on how the district can improve its financial situation.

New ring death raising old questions about boxing

The death of 20-year-old Mike Whitehead, a boxer from Los Angeles, in a fight with 31-year-old Tony Zale on Friday in Chicago has raised questions about the future of boxing and the safety of its fighters. Whitehead was knocked down twice in the fourth round and was declared dead from a massive head injury. The death has brought renewed attention to the issue of head injuries in boxing, particularly the use of headgear and the effectiveness of the rules governing the sport. Whitehead's death has also sparked calls for reform, including stricter regulations and better medical oversight.

Deadline passes as Legislators fight over tuition

By ROGER LIGHTFOOT

Roger Lightfoot

The California legislature is facing a deadline this week to pass a tuition bill. The bill, proposed by Senator Fowler, would require public colleges and universities to charge tuition fees. The bill has been controversial, with some lawmakers arguing that it would make higher education more expensive and others arguing that it would increase access to higher education.

Senator Fowler, a Republican, said: "Our state's higher education system is crumbling. We need to take action to ensure that students have access to quality education."

Despite coming off a long season in 1983, BC football is looking forward to a strong 1984 season. The team has been working hard in the off-season, and the players are excited to get back on the field.

The BC line is a key component of the team's success, and the players are determined to bring their A-game.

Maranda, on the other hand, is focused on providing the best care for his patients. "Horses are special animals," he said. "They have their own way of communicating, and we need to listen to them.

BC veterinarian Ray Maranda more than a field surgeon

By R. R. Hay

The traditional role of a veterinarian is to keep animals healthy and happy. But at BC College Fair, Ray Maranda brings his expertise to the field of equine care.

Maranda has been working with horses for over 30 years and has a unique approach to caring for them. He believes in treating horses as individuals, which is why he often focuses on holistic care.

Maranda’s approach has helped many horses and their owners, and he is committed to providing the best care possible. His dedication to his patients has earned him a reputation as a field surgeon.

For the last several months, a work of art has been in progress on campus. Created outside the normal confines of the fine arts building, this beautiful and inspiring completion is in the final stages of the BC gym.

In the past, other similar works of art have been displayed at BC. President Richard Wright is facing the challenge of placing this project in the budget. The project, which is likely to be a $1 million undertaking, is expected to be completed by the end of the year. The new mural will feature a large, bold, and colorful representation of the university's history and culture.

BC budget burns while 'Sacto' fiddles

Last week was a busy one at BC. President Richard Wright is in the process of preparing the BC budget for the fiscal year. The budget includes a plan for the construction of a new gymnasium, a new library, and a new art museum. The plan also includes a reduction in faculty positions due to the tough economic times.

The BC budget committee will meet this week to review the draft budget. The committee will make recommendations to the president, who will then present the budget to the Board of Trustees for final approval. The budget includes a number of initiatives to reduce costs and increase efficiency, including the consolidation of several departments and the elimination of some faculty positions. The budget also includes funding for a new athletics program, which is expected to bring in additional revenue.

According to Wright, appropriately 150 full-time teaching positions are needed at BC. Many of the changes will not be visible to the public, but they will affect the overall functioning of the university. The budget also includes funding for the construction of a new dormitory, which is expected to be completed next year. The dormitory will provide additional housing for students and will help to reduce the need for off-campus housing.

In addition to the budget, Wright is also facing pressure from the state legislature to reduce costs. The legislature has asked BC to provide plans for cuts in the upcoming fiscal year. Wright is expected to present a plan to the state legislature in the next few weeks, which will include a number of initiatives to reduce costs and increase efficiency.

Goodwin assesses political power

By LUCINDA DILLON
Editor-in-Chief

Although the current Sacramento political power structure is changing, the community college district is not immune to these changes. Goodwin is a strong advocate for the community college district and is working to ensure that the district remains a part of the political landscape.

The community college district is facing a number of challenges, including a reduction in state funding and an increase in student tuition. Goodwin is working to ensure that the district remains a strong voice in the political arena.

Because the community college district is a significant player in the political landscape, it is important for Goodwin to remain active and involved. The district has a number of initiatives underway, including the expansion of its online programs and the creation of new community centers. These initiatives are expected to bring in additional revenue and help to increase the district's visibility.

Forensics team ready to compete

BY KELLY WARD

The forensics team, led by coach Neil Low, is preparing for their upcoming competitions.

"Last year was really exciting," Low said. "We were able to make it to the national championships. It was a great year for us."

Low said that this year's team is even stronger and is looking forward to seeing how they perform.

"We have a lot of returning talent and a lot of new players," Low said. "We are looking to build on last year's success and make it even better this year."

The forensics team will be competing in several tournaments throughout the year, including the national championships.

"We are looking forward to seeing all the other teams," Low said. "It will be a great opportunity for our team to compete and show what we can do."

Low said that the team is working hard to improve their skills and prepare for the upcoming season.

"We are putting in a lot of hard work," Low said. "We are working on refining our techniques and improving our overall performance."

Low said that he is confident in his team's ability to succeed and is excited to see what they can achieve.

"I have a lot of faith in my team," Low said. "They are a talented group of individuals and I believe that we can achieve great things."

Willie in Wonderland

The fact that at 70 years old, Willie Mays is still playing baseball is truly amazing. But it's not just the fact that he's still playing, it's the fact that he's still playing at a high level. The legendary baseball player, now a coach and commentator, is still putting on a show for the fans. His swing is as smooth as ever, and his presence on the field is still electrifying. It's a testament to his love for the game and his commitment to his craft. Willie Mays is a true legend, and his ability to continue playing at this level is a true inspiration. It's a reminder that with passion and dedication, anything is possible.
