Board bombarded with negotiation issue

By KIMBERLY WARD Staff Writer

Sparring buttons embellished with the slogan "Seems Baked Not At Touch", members of both the local chapter of the California Teachers Association (CTA) and the California School Employees Association (CSEA) awaited the bi-monthly meeting of the Board of Trustees of the Kern Community College District, Thursday.

Members, according to Jacques Thibaud, president of the local CTA chapter, were sort of "emotionally asked to get up and speak", offered each other an eye as they got up and bombarded the Board with allegations of "bad faith bargaining" and "impropriety".

Thibaud, who began the long string of speeches, both impassioned and deranged, stood and said that he "had been before them several times to give them the faculty's position on the proposed salary increase.

"I am here again to tell you that the faculty is not pleased with the District's current offer," he said.

"Members of both sides feel that the District should make use of the money currently being held in reserve because of expected increases in the average teacher's income (ATI) during next year.

"The District's current offer, $7,750, is 7.5% of the faculty's salary, which is less than the ATI increase.

"The faculty feels that the District is not willing to meet the faculty's demands and is not considering the faculty's overall needs.

"The faculty is not satisfied with the District's current offer and will continue to bargain until a fair and reasonable agreement is reached.

"We are determined to negotiate a fair and reasonable settlement that will benefit both the faculty and the students."

No answers found for pressed 'Ivy-leaguers'

I was a child of the 1940s, and the image that comes to mind when I hear the term 'Ivy-leaguer' is that of a snobbish, privileged elite who thought of themselves as superior to others. It's a term that conjures up images of elitism and exclusivity, which I find objectionable.

I don't have the answers, but I do think it's important for us to consider the context in which the term 'Ivy-leaguer' was coined. The term has been used to describe people who have attended prestigious universities, often referred to as 'Ivy League' institutions. These universities are often associated with wealth and privilege, which can lead to a sense of entitlement among their students.

I believe it's important for us to challenge these stereotypes and recognize the diversity among the students who attend these institutions. It's important to remember that not all students from these universities are privileged or entitled.

The term 'Ivy-leaguer' seems to be associated with elitism and exclusivity, which is a concern for me. I think it's important for us to reflect on the meaning of the term and consider alternative language that is more inclusive.

Stop, look, listen; are elderly drivers competent?

As a resident of a senior living community, I have noticed that many elderly drivers seem to be more cautious on the road. They are more likely to follow the rules and drive at a safe speed. However, there are still some elderly drivers who seem to be more reckless and put themselves and others at risk.

I think it's important for us to recognize the diversity among the elderly drivers and to consider alternative language that is more inclusive. It's important to remember that not all elderly drivers are the same, and it's important to avoid making generalizations.

The term 'Ivy-leaguer' seems to be associated with elitism and exclusivity, which is a concern for me. I think it's important for us to reflect on the meaning of the term and consider alternative language that is more inclusive.

Slater makes debut

By MARK ALLENDER

Last week I was able to see one of the biggest events occurring in my city. The concert was at the local venue and was packed with the best of the city's music artists.

One of the highlights of the night was a performance by a local band. The performer was a local favorite and had a large following. The crowd was cheering and dancing as the band played.

The concert was a success and a great night for music in our city.

Watts puts originality into her work

By LUCINDA DILLON

Editor-in-Chief

Watts is a student journalist at UNLV whose originality and creativity have made her stand out in the competitive field of journalism. She has consistently produced innovative and engaging content, earning her recognition and praise from both her peers and instructors. Watts's approach to her work is marked by a strong sense of curiosity and a desire to explore new perspectives and ideas. Her dedication to her craft is evident in her willingness to take risks and push the boundaries of traditional reporting.

In her most recent piece, Watts delved into the complex issue of data privacy and its implications for the digital age. The story was not only well-researched but also presented in a fresh and engaging manner. Watts interviewed experts in the field, drawing insights from their perspectives and integrating them into her narrative in a way that was both informative and thought-provoking.

Watts also demonstrates a talent for multimedia storytelling. Her latest piece included interactive graphics and visuals that brought the story to life, enhancing the reader's understanding and engagement. This innovative use of technology and design is a testament to Watts's ability to adapt to the ever-evolving landscape of journalism.

In addition to her editorial work, Watts is also active in various extracurricular activities. She is a member of the UNLV Debate Team, where she has honed her skills in critical thinking and public speaking. Watts's involvement in these activities has further honed her abilities and allowed her to develop a well-rounded perspective.

Watts's originality and creativity are not limited to her writing. She is also known for her unique approach to design and multimedia. Her work is characterized by a fresh and original visual style, which sets her apart from her peers. Watts's dedication to her craft is evident in the time and effort she invests in each project, which is reflected in the high-quality output she produces.

Watts is a prime example of what can be achieved when passion, creativity, and hard work come together. Her dedication to her craft and her ability to adapt to the ever-changing landscape of journalism make her a shining example for aspiring journalists.

Gades at a loss with long season

By MIKE NICHOLAS
Sports Editor

In most sports, the time at which a team is as important as the time itself, and the situation is so exceptional that the outcome cannot be predicted. After a 2-1 start in Metropolitan League action, the Gades have improved their record to 8-10, with a pair of victories last week that included a 3-2 setback of the first team in the league, the Metros, at Los Angeles.

For BC, the season is long, with 10 games left in the team's schedule. The Gades would be in the thick of a playoff battle with the thirdplaced half, making it necessary for the Gades to win a straight 31 games before the Metros have gone out of playoff contention.

BC Coach Bob Berry, said: "We're a good team, but we're doing the best we can. We're not a good team, but we're doing the best we can.

The reorganization of the Gades was guided by the decision to move the Siskiyou Conference to the middle of the season, and the new format has helped. I wouldn't trade a game for any two pitchers in California.

The Gades did better with the higher scoring teams and the lower scoring teams in the series. That's what we've had all season, and we've been pretty consistent. We've been pretty consistent.
