Douglas Fowler, 35, from Santa Barbara, was checking on his horse that's sick or sore you aren't letting them come to the break room or to prepare the animal. They say you're not going to work and you're not going to win any money, he said.

He said that's sick or sore you aren't taking care of their animals, they might change preparations. They would think if they realized a mechanical bull, they might change preparation. They would think they're used to preparation, but if you realize a mechanical bull, they might change if some time. So basically, they say you're not going to work and you're not going to win any money, he said.

Fair-time means having to spend the day with your family

By AMBER GARCIA

Fair staff writer

When I think of family fun, three words come to mind: County Fair. As a child, the fair was a wonderful experience that I looked forward to every year. Now, as an adult, I still enjoy the fair, but with a different perspective.

The fair is a place where families can come together and have fun. It's a place where everyone is welcome, regardless of age or background. The fair is a place where people can connect and create memories that will last a lifetime.

There are so many different things to see and do at the fair. From the midway rides to the livestock shows, there is something for everyone. I remember going to the fair as a child and being amazed by the variety of exhibits. From the livestock shows to the midway rides, there was always something new to see and do.

I also remember going to the fair with my family. We would spend the day together, and it was always a special time. I remember one year when we went to the fair, and my brother and I won a stuffed animal. It was a moment that I will never forget, and it is a memory that I value dearly.

Fair-time means having to spend the day with your family. It can be a daunting task, but it is also a rewarding one. It is a time to bond with your family, to create memories, and to enjoy the simple pleasures of life. It is a time to be with the people you love, and that is what makes it special.

"Mayor Giuliani has to be with those firefighters, but he will be in the world, my friends, and we will do it together. Do not leave before that because you are going to be a very, very special day."
— George Martin, during his remarks at the beginning of the conference

... "I'm very, very glad I was able to make it because this was a difficult day a year after a year of pain, a few difficult days, and it is very pleasing to walk out here and see you, with all the American flags, your tremendous strength and enthusiasm for this country."
— Rudy Giuliani

... "If America's a milk cow with 280 million udders, we'll need all the bag balm we can get."
— Alan Simpson, on why he kept his brave bag balm on his desk while he was in Congress

... "He wrote me an e-mail shortly before he died, on my birthday, that said, 'Happy Birthday to the best son-in-law I ever had. Close, in fact, I should say, my confidante, my advisor, my support, my friend.' That was the most valuable piece of paper that I own. I would crumple it up and throw it away from Yale Law School in a second compared to keeping that letter from my father."
— Ben Stein, on his love for his father and the importance of family

... "The great discussion of what's the difference is: 'We were at home, and Osama bin Laden is wanted.'"

M.E.C.A. walkout sparks debate about need for additional classes.

M.E.C.A. has sparked a lot of debate lately over whether or not a Chicano Studies Department should be started at BC. Here are some of the reasons why people are for and against a Chicano Studies Department.

For:

1. There isn't a Chicano Studies Department at BC or anywhere else, so there's a need for it. There's a huge amount of Chicano scholars who want to make their voices heard.

Against:

1. BC already has a Chicano Studies Department, but it needs improvement. There are a lot of things that could be changed to make it better.

The debate continues, and there are still many more points to be made on both sides. It's up to the students to decide what they think should happen.

Draft dodging is not the answer

By ARCHER SERRA

As the United States prepares for a war in Iraq, many people are debating the idea of drafting soldiers to fight.

The concept of the draft was established in the United States to ensure that all citizens have the opportunity to serve in the military, regardless of their social status or economic background. However, the implementation of this system has been controversial and has faced legal challenges.

Many people believe that the draft is outdated and unfair, and that a system of voluntary enlistment should be in place instead. This system would allow individuals to choose whether or not to serve in the military, and would ensure that those who are drafted are not forced into a situation they may not want to be in.

In conclusion, the idea of draft dodging is not an acceptable solution to the current debate over the use of the draft. Instead, we should focus on developing a system that is fair and just for all citizens.

ANAHEIM — A day like this only comes around once every 42 years. The sky may have been gray for game one of the 2002 World Series, but that did not stop Angels fans from coming out of the woodwork to celebrate their first-time home team made it to the show. The atmosphere was electric on the corner of State College Avenue and Gene Autry Way, where fans lined up Oct. 19, forming a long red and blue snake winding its way around Edison International Field. At the mouth of the entrance to the stadium hundreds of people mill around waiting for the gates to open, while others held up make-shift signs begging for a ticket to what would be a milestone in Angels history.

Okla fans of the team wore caps from the early days when the team was the California Angels. Still there were a few brave fans donning the traditional black and orange of the San Francisco Giants. Their endurance of the procession from the national road to the stadium paid off, because the Giants won the first game 4-3, proving that all of the Cheers and all of Barry Bonds from hitting a home run.
