Dance instructor feels the effect of budget cuts

By Michael Wofford

Ex-Lynn Thomas has spent the last 26 years dancing with and teaching at Bakersfield College. The dance instructor recently found out that her department will be cut at the end of the semester.

"The thing that I'm going to really miss is seeing so many beginning students who've never been in a dance room or to a dance class," she said. "I enjoyed being able to take them on a journey of discovery about the dance studio and the art of dance... and seeing the excitement in their eyes." Thomas said this attitude transcended all of her dance students.

According to Thomas, being able to connect with her students and help them grow in their passion was the most rewarding part of her job.

"I love my job and I love working with students," Thomas said. "I feel like I've grown a lot with them too. They've taught me a lot about life and I've learned a lot from them.

As the semester comes to an end, Thomas said she feels the same love for her students that she did when she first started.

"I just want them to know that they've made a huge impact on my life," Thomas said.

Transfer students get sent off in style

By James Licea

Bakersfield College’s graduating transfer students were honored on April 16 with a reception held in the cafeteria. The food department catered the event and prepared meals with enough variety to accommodate different dietary requirements.

The event was kicked off with an introduction by the president of the transfer student association, BC student правительств. "It was a great idea to have something that honors our transfer students," BC president Greg O’Connor said.

One of the highlights of the evening was a speech by the student government president, Tara Thompson. "I thought it would be a good idea to have someone talk about their experience at BC," Thompson said.

Over 120 invitations were sent out to BC students who are transfer students. Only about 100 of those contacts responded and confirmed their attendance.

The students were honored not only as long as they are in the process of transferring, but also for those who have already transferred.

The event was a great way to show support for this program, according to O’Connor, who said that BC has a strong tradition of helping students get to where they need to be.

The event was a great way to show support for the arts and culture at BC, according to O’Connor. "It’s an important part of BC’s identity, and we want to make sure that that continues to thrive in the future.

Finals cast a shadow on social lives of students

By James Licea

During the last week of the spring semester, many students at Bakersfield College are preparing for finals. While they get ready for these tests, students must also prepare for the social events that are taking place on campus.

A number of clubs and organizations have planned events for this week, including the Student Government Association, the Associated Students, and the College Republicans.

These events are taking place as students are getting ready for their tests, so it can be a stressful time for many.

However, some students said they are excited to attend these events and enjoy some time off before final exams.

"I think it’s important to have some breaks before finals," said a student. "It’s a good way to recharge before the final stretch.

Others said they are looking forward to attending events and spending time with friends.

"I’m excited to see my friends and have some fun," said another student.

Regardless of how students feel about the final exams, many are looking forward to the social events that are taking place on campus.

BC Republicans breathe fresh life into old club

By James Licea

Bakersfield College Republicans is a club that has been around for many years, but it has had a recent rebirth.

The club was originally started in the 1980s, but it had a few members who were active and passed on the idea to new students.

"I think it’s important to have a club that represents the Republican Party on campus," said a member of the club.

The club has recently added a number of new members, and they are excited to have more people interested in the political views of the Republican Party.

Politics viewed as an afterthought in student lives for excellent reasons

By Kahil Kuzmick

You probably don’t care about politics. Should you?

Not everyone has been recently immersed in the political realm, but it seems likely that the young and even older generation is losing interest in the democratic processes and events that impact our daily lives. This is a gross error, because those who do not vote for anything truly important are no better off than those who do vote. Those who do not care about politics are no more entitled to their world than those who do. In many cases the political world is sick from the inside out and needs to be overhauled. In any case, the realization that many people do not care for politics should be quite frightening to all of us. Even if you are not a politician, you should be concerned about the problems within the system, and even if you do not care, you should care about the things that will happen because of your general apathy. In any case, this apathy is not acceptable.

Show how you feel about people coming into the BC campus to recruit

By James Lien

With the state of California’s economy in tatters and people walking about who will be cut next, in many cases the idea of where the money should be taken is on the minds of everyone. Recently, the most popular cut was the state’s Community Colleges. John and Ken, two popular media thinkers have been Missing California’s Community Colleges. The two men have briefly discussed Community Colleges, but there isn’t much you should know! They then go on to say that we can’t just vote for things that we want, we can’t get out of it and call someone else to vote for us, and we have no idea what to do. Although I do not think that student turnout is that low, I do understand what John and Ken are trying to say, but I think it should be called a time for a change.

One reason that people try to avoid voting is that “wasting” it is better. “waste” means that the actual outcome is the same as the previous one. That is not the case, however. If more people voted, the job would be done and the leadership of the nation would change. More people would be elected, and the leadership of the nation would change. In any case, the problem is that many people are not aware of the importance of voting. For example, if more people voted, the country would be in a better position to handle the current crisis, and the leadership of the nation would change.

California Community Colleges, the nation’s largest two-year school system totaling in $1.4 billion, according to state data, is in good shape. If policies in the workplace were better, more money could be saved from the state’s budget.

I cannot even completely imagine what might happen if someone’s reasoning is behind why certain money is not allocated. For example, in the case of the state’s Community Colleges, the money is meant to help the state and its citizens. If the money is not allocated, the state and its citizens would suffer. For example, if the money is not allocated to the state’s Community Colleges, the state and its citizens would suffer.

Corrections of errors in the United States is not a mistake. Celebrate America, for our fine arts at our feet, and the united stands, the fact that we are not so serious. We are not so serious. We are not so serious. We are not so serious.

Everything you can do is something that has no demand for, or it is difficult and time consuming. It is very wise to look forward to the future, but it is also wise to look forward to the future.

For some people, a name says a lot about them. For brothers Steven and Christopher Drummer, their name says almost everything.

“I didn’t even realize our last name made us the perfect audition. We just thought we were a couple of drummers,” said Christopher, 19, while laughing. “If we’re going by our last name, we don’t even know our first names.

Since the two began playing drums, they’ve always gone on to become part of a world that drum corps and cadet bands call their community.

“Music is just the thing we love,” it’s in our DNA. We do it naturally. We can just stand there and play and make sure that we’re not just walking on the stage,” said Steven, 20.

Originally from Los Angeles, the brothers moved to Bakersfield in 1996 when their family’s church relocated.

Christopher, who plays the tenor drums, goes to Cal State Bakersfield and is majoring in music, but in the drumline class at Bakersfield College. Steven’s a full-time student at BC and also in the drumline at BC.

He plays the snare drum.

Both brothers are members of the Blue Devil Drum Line and Biquq B-Corp whose鸡d division, won the title of BC, the second highest, are the Drum Corps International Open Class champions. Both corps competed with teams from across the United States and world.

Said Steven. “I started playing drums because a member of the Blue Devil Drum Corps A year later Chris came to Bakersfield, looking at my brother and saying that he’s not a bad guy. But then he said, ‘I’m proud of him’.”

While the brothers are proud to be a part of a championship-winning organization, they haven’t looked down on the rockers.

“I don’t even talk about it anymore. Because it’s in the past. Plus, there are always new things to do. We’re sick of it. We’re last but one it’s already time we start working on this,” said Christopher. “We’re about to start competing in a month or two so you can’t reflect on the past.”

Both began playing drums a little over a year ago. The younger brother and Brown, who played the drums, Christopher said.

“Told me about B-BHS when were freshmen. I had their older brother, Michael Drummer was in the shows: ‘Rock and Roll Part V: ‘Pop Rock,’ ‘Maggie,’” he added.

The cast made this role my favorite. Like when I first acted in the future. The director believes that the combined ideas would make for an epic movie,” he added.

Carroll’s been a fan of New Orleans. He’s been to work and still make the kids watch the show. We do it to entertain the kids,” he said.

Christopher also acts in the Spotlight Theater. He also said that he’d like to work with George Lucas.

“George Lucas and Michael Bay would be fun to work with because their combined ideas would make for an epic movie,” he added.
