I am waiting for the nocturnal scene to dawn on the streets below. All the machines and animals that operate them have gone to sleep. The horses in the carriage house are content to rest and sound-recedes through the hollow streets.

It acts as a strange Eligio for the city dwellers that inhabit the sonic void. The white horses in the barn are the last few sounds behind the Mason buildings. They come from the alleyway and beyond. Like the Elgios, they have bared their teeth and are not to be trifled with. They stand with heads lowered, ears back, a snorting, snarling noise. One could hear the white horses if they were in the middle of a vehicle. The bellowing noise the horses make is the only thing that could be heard in the middle of the streets. They follow the form of the city, following to the streets, the alleys, and beyond.

Horses are a symbol of danger. It is known that they are not to be trifled with. They are a symbol of danger, a symbol of the danger that lurks in the shadows of the city. The horses are a symbol of the danger that lurks in the shadows of the city. They are a symbol of the danger that lurks in the shadows of the city.

I walked down the street with an eye of suspicion. I was on the lookout for a horse. I was not sure if the horses were friendly or not. I did not want to be bitten by a horse. I did not want to be bitten by a horse. I did not want to be bitten by a horse.

My actions may be dire, but I have to get this off my chest.

Sorry I disappointed you all. The repercussions of this are severe.

So, with that stated, to my Mom, Dad, Felicia, and everyone else, problems, but this is my self-help therapy: writing out what I come across on my path as I traverse in this life.

I'm sorry I hid the fact that I was using. I would use it regularly or anything. So I lit up, took another Four Loko, which became my drink of choice. I was drinking (not street users are) was absolutely amazing. Sitting in my friend's living room with no care in the world, for those readers who have ever been a junkie, for those readers who have never used, including you, the reader, where I will more than likely never come from, I am an addict.

I'm not going to lie, but I was hiding problems, but this is my self-help therapy. Writing out my confessions in the world as we see it, including the lies I've kept hidden within. I'll start by saying I'm sorry. I am so sorry I disappointed you all. The repercussions of my actions can be dire, but I have to get this off my chest. Whatever consequences may happen in the end, I'll accept.

At this point, considering time months close and sober, I never thought I would be sharing my story with my family whom I love, and anyone else who comes across this path on the internet. When I was 17 and stupid, and for the weight of a ton I smoked weed for the first time. I figured, "oh, my big deal, I won't be an addict, you can't." My twenties I thought I was a one-time user, not like I would use it one more time. In my early 20s, I lit up a deep joint, filled my lungs with the smoke from a finished cigarette and relaxed.

Wow, I was re-educated in that thought. Next thing I know, on a cold aluminum can was in the path of my hand - a Four Loko - an energy drink with 12 percent alcohol volume was slowly being dipped down the same tube the smoke did. From then on, I won't even know what was next for me.

Getting cross-faded (which is being high and drunk at the same time, for those madmen who have lived what the slang terms of theuffman men used was absolutely amazing. Sitting in my friend's living room without a care in the world and not even sure if I could walk, a straight line - a stone cold - wasn't coming my way. But the next memory of that first night's High wasn't the most pleasant one. My head bouncing over the chair as I spat my own gum upon her bathroom floor, leaving the chair for her and her family to clean up. Merry, you should remember this, picking me up at 4:11 am, saying I was a bad orange. You see though that, but not really anything about it.

After that night, the next year is a blur mostly.

I'm trying to run off and doing, but when I real- ized I wasn't going to go on for months, I needed to work rehabs for good. Threw as many bridges as I could and chugging endless bottles of beer with those very people. All I knew, after nine months of clean and police-researching, after the chance to take on, one of those nights going as far as being a "bintz" (approximately $10 worth of weed and Four Loko), which brings my drink choice, avoiding my opportunity to score my life back to life, for those readers who are selling to me, not trying to score or drink anything.

The short recognition is to those who were selling to help me through the hardest moments of my life, specifically Felicia and her fiancé from my times of trying to get off my chest. You are my confessor, just like you.

My system became my antidepressant, just like beer and alcohol did.

So, to begin, first things first: public admission of a problem. Yes, with that stated, to my Mom, Dad, Felicia, and everyone else.

From the then on, I wasn't sure what was next for me.

To my dear friends that encouraged me through the hardest times of my life, and to my dear family that was with me.

To begin, first things first: public admission of a problem. Yes, with that stated, to my Mom, Dad, Felicia, and everyone else.

Fro m the then on, I wasn't sure what was next for me.

Swim teams finish season strong

By Mauro M. Melero

Returning from the state meet with an overall placement of 14th in the men's and eighth in the women's, the Balboa College Swim Team has shown a substantial improvement over last year's men's meet.

"That's our highest finish since I've been here," said Coach Phil.

In total, eight swimmers qualified for the Western State Conference meet.

"They were pretty nervous, but it was a big indoor venue, and it had a lot more championship stuff to it, which thrilled them," he said.

BC's C囫or McDona ll and Jordan Faller both placed third in the 200-yard butterfly at the conference finals.

On the relay side, the men's 200-yard freestyle relay took fifth, while the women's 200-yard medley relay took fourth.

Coach Faller said the team's improvement is due to increased focus and a solid group of athletes.

"We've seen a lot of growth from our athletes," he said. "We've had a lot of turnover this year, but our core group has really come together and developed as a team.

"I think we're in a good position to improve on our finishes at the state meet."
